Values Voting (follow-up certification every 2 years)

When we have a strong negative opinion about a person, we tend to act as though one or two characteristics that we don't like sum up the entire person. We may even be able to state our feelings in a single statement about that person. In life we must make choices. Our values and beliefs affect the choices we make. Sometimes those choices affect our behaviors. In this safe classroom environment, participants will be given the opportunity to explore their personal values and see how they may impact their behavior in the workplace. During this workshop, participants will: 1) have the opportunity to make a public affirmation of personal values, 2) develop awareness of the judgments that people make about those perceived as different, 3) increase understanding of the ways in which values affect choices and behavior, and 4) participate in creative thinking that goes beyond limitations and strives to accommodate differences.

Customer Service Skills and Strategies

Customers can sometimes place unrealistic expectations on service providers. They expect us to solve all problems, have all the answers, and, at times, get angry with us or resent the regulatory role with which government is charged. During the second half of the workshop, you will learn specific things you can do when faced with angry or hostile customers. Participants will: 1) Learn to deal with emotions first; 2) Discuss how to NOT "take the bait" when dealing with a hostile person; and 3) Learn specific hostile defusing techniques that can be used anywhere. We've all taken part in conversations that we wouldn't necessarily want preserved on tape. Who hasn't traded a shady rumor or two now and then? But gossip can do real damage, and is a hurtful means of communication. (Beginning in 2018, this course combines "Customer Service Skills" and "Defusing Hostile Customers.")
